| Josefa Leonel Correia Sacko, Commissioner for Rural Economy and Agriculture, African Union Commission | Opening | ● Highlights the importance of the summit agenda for African countries for three reasons:

1) The African continent is still struggling from structural and transitory food insecurity coupled with other problems
2) Food systems are deeply affected by COVID and the Ukraine war
3) The African Union will soon be embarking on a consultative process for initiating and designing a post-Malabo program

● Announces that they have planned to launch a three-year African Union operation plan for the transformation of African food systems 2024-2026
● Hopes that Minister of Finance will work with financial institutions to develop and submit an African agri-food system financing mechanism |

| 4. | Laura Suazo, Minister of Agriculture and Livestock of Honduras                   | Opening  | ● Some of her commitments include encouraging the UN representatives back home to have a meeting like the UNFSS+2 with actors from all the sectors-farmers, private sector, civil society, etc.
● Urges to work together towards a financial model that is tailored towards the needs of farmers with appropriate interests
● There needs to be a stronger attention to the commercialisation of agricultural products
● We need to give more values to the practice of farming and farmers
● “The time for accelerating change is not now, it was yesterday”                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 5. | Vatimi Rayalu, Minister for Agriculture, Fiji                                    | Opening  | ● Fiji has a national youth policy within the Ministry of Agriculture and the aim is to actively involve young people in the agricultural development
● In Fiji there is a need for younger farmers
● They are looking to introduce technical vocational trainings into the education system to help in re-skilling young people in active agricultural production                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 6. | Nicolas Domke Venegas, Youth Representative from SENA Group                     | Panel    | [Spanish]                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

| 7 | Pramisha Thapaliya          | Youth Representative from World Food Forum | Panel        | ● Highlights how unfortunate it is that there is still a lacking partnership between National Conveners and Members States with the youth
● Asks for support to bring young people in the envisioned youth coalition to be partners in the implementation of national pathways
● Support young people with finance, capacity building and means of implementation |
| 8 | Cindy McCain                | Executive Director, WFP              | Panel        | ● We have the solutions; we need to act swiftly to implement and scale up these solutions
● 5 key areas requiring action:
1) promoting local production for local consumption
2) employing climate sensitive agricultural practices across the production chain
3) drastically reducing post-harvest loss
4) leveraging investments in public procurement to benefit rural communities
5) putting young people and women at the centre of our efforts
● Forging new and strong partnerships across sectors and organisations is crucial |
| 9 | Alvaro Lario                | President of IFAD                    | Speech       | ● The cost of inaction is much higher than the cost of action
● Alongside the World Bank, IFAD is taking a leading role in shaping the new financing agenda for food systems transformation and developing a tool on financial flows of food systems
● highlights the importance of partnerships |
| 10| QU Dongyu                   | FAO Director-General                 | Speech       | ● Food insecurities are becoming even more challenging due to the emerging risks- climate change, economic shocks, and enduring conflicts
● The infrastructure is important to ensure that what’s produced has access to the markets
● Putting people at the centre will help us design more efficient solutions
● We need to produce more with less
● Farmers hold the key to driving, adapting, and implementing new practices, innovation and technologies
● Moving forward we need to strengthen the Hub and further improve its work |

The session offered an opportunity for high-level speakers to reflect on the UNFSS+2 Summit and the key takeaways. As clearly addressed by all speakers, the stocktake provided us all with a space to amplify the successes and agree on the actionable next steps needed to make food systems work for people and the planet. Some of the key takeaways addressed during the Summit included:

1) the need to strategically embed the food systems strategies across all national policies for sustainable development
2) establish food systems governance that brings together all stakeholders across our society, most notably often marginalised communities—farmers, women, youth and Indigenous Peoples
3) leveraging investments in public procurement to benefit rural communities
4) engaging the private sector and promoting the accountability of business to shape the sustainability of food systems
5) promoting cross-collaboration across the varying sectors and working as a single team with one another
